

InfoNgen Makes its Debut on KMWorld's Trend-Setting Product List

InfoNgen's Enterprise Discovery Platform provides a uniquely turnkey and cost-efficient way to deploy an enterprise-class taxonomy and search solution

NEW YORK, NY, August 24, 2009 – InfoNgen, the first Discovery Engine for business, finance and information professionals, today announced that its Enterprise Discovery Platform has been named to KMWorld's Trend-Setting Product list of 2009.

InfoNgen is a real-time Discovery Engine, engineered with a flexible set of aggregation tools that are agnostic to content format. InfoNgen automatically monitors and extracts highly relevant content no matter where it resides – on the web, on a user's desktop, in emails or attachments, among workgroups or within an entire enterprise. By constantly scanning, indexing and automatically applying consistent business and financial meta-data to all sources of content, InfoNgen enables users to discover personally relevant information that's delivered in real time.

According to Hugh McKellar, KMWorld editor-in-chief, "InfoNgen was selected by the judging panel from among more than 800 products for demonstrating clearly identifiable technology breakthroughs that serve the company's full spectrum of constituencies, especially their customers."

"We're pleased that our platform's many advantages were recognized by the judging panel," said John Mahoney, co-founder and CTO of InfoNgen. "In particular, we've developed a unique architecture whereby searches can be transparently federated. This allows a client to install the InfoNgen Enterprise Discovery Appliance to manage their local email and file shares, while leveraging our cloud-based services to integrate various news feeds and web content. One query returns it all, giving clients a consistent, rationalized view of all the information sets they depend on – no matter where they may be stored."
